SQUALOR IN LONDON.

An English Architect Speaks Well of Washington.

A candid friend of London appeared in the person of Mr. Trevail, the new president of the Society of Architects, says the London Mail. In his presidential address at St. James' Hall Mr. Trevail said:

"The impression that always falls upon one when returning from either the European or American continents to London is the wretchedly narrow and insignificant-looking streets, with their low, mean, small shops and dwellings by contrast with what we have just left behind us. It is of little interest to be told how many hundreds of miles of the same sort of thing London contains, more than does any other metropolis in Christendom or elsewhere.

"The fact still remains in your mind in a general sense that London looks squalid and miserable by comparison, and that feeling affects one for days, until he once more gets seasoned into the old haunts, and relapses into that comfortable frame of mind that after all even the Strand and Chancery Lane, or Fleet street and Ludgate Circus, with all their advertising abominations, look at least familiar and homely!

"Take the city of London. It may have some of the finest commercial palaces in the world, rivaling those of old Venice herself; but look how they are huddled together. There is positively not the space to appreciate their design, their proportions or their detail. Compare the Champ Elysees, Place de la Concorde or the boulevards of Paris with our best streets and squares, and where are we?

"Or, say, the Ringstrasse of Vienna, or the Boulevard Andrassy at Budapest, or, carrying our thoughts across the Atlantic, to Broadway, Fifth avenue, Riverside and Central Park, New York; the Commonwealth avenue, Boston; Victoria square, Montreal; East avenue, Rochester; Delaware avenue, Buffalo; Drexel boulevard, Washington avenue, or State street, Chicago; Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, or dozens of others that might be named. Alongside of these our Strand, our Whitehall, our Victoria streets, Regent street, Piccadilly, Park lane, Oxford street, etc., are but wretched apologies for what leading streets and thoroughfares should be.

"If we except the Thames Embankment, Shaftesbury avenue, and the new thoroughfare that is about to be made between the Strand and Holborn, nothing of an adequate scale to the size and importance of this metropolis has yet been attempted. With the dilapidated, rickety old ramshackle properties that we see in some of the best and most central parts of London, what is wanted is a general rebuilding and improvement scheme fixed after mature deliberation by a competent central authority specially constituted by parliament, after consultation with the chief local authorities and perhaps the representative societies of architecture, sculpture and engineering, with a special regard to its qualifications and fitness for the purpose.

"This would be merely following the example that has been set in such capitals as Paris, Vienna and Washington."

Half Price for a Shins.

A West side woman having occasion to go into one of the local railroad depots to meet a friend, strolled around the commodious building whilst waiting for the train to roll in. By accident she entered a room where the following sign was displayed:

"Ladies' and Gentlemen's Shoes Shined Here."

"What do you charge for ladies' shoes?" she inquired of the attendant.

"Ten cents," replied the obliging polisher.

The woman, having satisfied her curiosity, turned and was about to leave the room, when the ambitious youngster touched her arm, and, in a stage whisper, remarked:

"If you is low down financial I'll do it for half price."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

IN MEMORIAM.

Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1901, the spirit of Ona Belle Blevins returned unto God who gave it. For several months she had been the most patient of sufferers—no murmur ever passed her lips. Her thought was not of self, but of others. Her sublime altruism was shown in her heroic endeavor to leave some slight token to those whom she loved most dearly. Although her earthly pilgrimage was brief, yet the influence of her beautiful life will not soon be forgotten. She lived on a plane far removed from the low, base and sordid things of time. The true, the beautiful and the good—the higher things of God, were her delight. She knew in whom she believed, like Mary she had chosen the better part, and for this reason had caught that broader vision of love and service. Let us then rejoice with her and not mourn for her. Yea though pale death knocks at the cottage and palace gate alike, yet there is One who answers I am the resurrection and the life.

"In the Paradise of Jesus There are many homes of light, And they shine beyond the darkness With a radiance clear and bright. There are sounds of many voices In the golden streets above, Filling all the air with gladness Blended in eternal love.

Can we see the happy faces Of the dear ones gone before? They are ready now to greet us When we gain the blessed shore. Never shall be closed again; We shall see within the city Jesus with his white-robed train."

HOLY LAND.

Lexington Hebrew Discusses the Movement to Reclaim It.

Jews are now interested in the Zionist movement, which has for its object reclaiming the Holy Land by purchase.

In many sections of this country meetings have been held by them and contributions raised to aid in the movement. A well-known Lexington Hebrew in speaking of the project said:

"This movement to reclaim the Holy Land has long been agitated and the present interest manifested will finally result in the purchase. Since the Jewish people have left that land it has gone to waste. Its splendor which was in olden times the cause of visits from monarchs is now but a matter of history. The land is still fertile and when it again becomes the property of the Jews it will not be long before it becomes an important factor in the world. Of course it is too small to play a great part in politics but it will be a factor in many ways. Lexington Hebrews and the Jewish world is deeply interested in the movement. Every day letters written in every language are being received by those in charge.

It will be a long time before the migration becomes heavy. Those who go soon will be those from countries where oppression exists—such as in Russia.

In this country Jews are too closely identified with it to leave, but the reclamation of the Holy Land will act as a magnet and gradually it will be settled and become the stronghold of the Jews.—Lexington Herald.

The Choice of the Rifle for Big Game.

The rifle is the most important part of the hunter's outfit.

Every sportsman has his own ideas about his rifle; some swear by one particular make and others are equally loud in the praise of another, and they both may be correct.

The main qualities in a rifle for large game are: Shocking power, a low flat and true trajectory, accuracy, penetration, and range.

It is very difficult to get an arm that has all these qualities combined. Those that have some of them are deficient in others and so it goes.

Sportsmen often condemn a 30-30 caliber rifle, because when shooting at a deer with a metal jacket bullet and high power military smokeless powder the bullet develops such a great velocity as to stun the animal without doing it any serious harm, and the hunter is greatly taken by surprise when he sees his game leap up and disappear.

Another instance when metal jacket bullets are used is for the animal to go miles, unless struck in a vital part, without leaving any trail, for the first step it takes it draws the hide over the wound and stops the blood from escaping.

It is best to have a pistol-grip on your rifle; for it gives a firm hold to the hand and prevents the wrist from flying up as it would do in any ordinary straight grip.

An octagon barrel is also preferable to a round one if it is procurable.

For shooting in Maine, Canada and the Adirondacks the 30-30 Winchester, md. 1894, the 45-90 Winchester md. 1886, the 30-30 Savage and the 38-72 md. 1895, Winchester.

Some sportsmen and guides use the 38-55, but that cartridge will scarcely go through a deer at the shoulder while the 38-72 will do that with ease and keep on going.

For Western shooting in the Rockies nothing will surpass the Winchester, model 1895, 30-40, with soft nose bullets and the 303 Savage.

The 45-90 and 38-72 Winchester rifles are also good for Western shooting.

Woman is often referred to by man as "doubling his joys and halving his sorrows." That may be complimentary but it would seem to be rather hard on the woman. For in plain terms it means that where things are going well with the man his wife makes them go better. But when things are going ill with him, he expects the wife to share half his burden. And there's more truth than poetry in this presentation of masculine selfishness. Men don't appreciate the fact that the strain of motherhood alone is a burden bigger than all the loads that rest upon male shoulders. They see the wife grow thin, pale, nervous and worn without a thought that she is overburdened. Among the pleasant letters received by Dr. Pierce are those from husbands who have waked up before it was too late to the crushing burdens laid upon the wife, and in the search for help have found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a restorative which has given back to the mother the health of the maiden and the maiden's happiness. "Favorite Prescription" always helps, and almost always cures. It has perfectly cured ninety-eight out of every hundred women who have used it when afflicted with diseases peculiar to women.
